TABLE of CONTENTS

Introduction 1

PART I: RECONNAISSANCE 6

1. The writer who observes the battlefield before entering the fray will be better equipped to plan strategy and tactics. ... 8
2. The writer must understand the essentials of success for a long-term writing career, and count the cost accordingly. ... 11
3. Know the difference between a hero and a fool. ... 16
4. A foundation in discipline is always the first step toward victory. ... 18
5. Career fiction writers must be aware of what the successful writing life is like. ... 22
6. A wise and well-respected writer once said, “Nobody knows anything.” Listen to him. ... 25
7. Whining will not help you win the battle for publication. ... 27
8. “Do the thing you fear, and the death of fear is certain.” ... 28
9. The outsized ego is not a weapon of value. ... 31
10. Status, worry, and comparison are ways to madness, not victory. ... 33
11. To keep from turning off those who can publish you, you must not be desperate. ... 37

- 12. The career novelist will develop a writing improvement program, beginning with a notebook. ... 39
- 13. A writer must always be prepared to break through "the wall." ... 42
- 14. Turn envy into energy and more words. ... 45
- 15. The successful novelist will not worry about competition, but will concentrate only on the page ahead. ... 47
- 16. Don't worry about being worried, and don't let worry drag you down. ... 50
- 17. Stay hungry so your determination will not flag. ... 53
- 18. An army travels on its stomach, so savor some fish. ... 56
- 19. The fiction writer must rely on self-motivation. ... 58
- 20. A gentle reminder can deliver great force at just the right time. ... 60
- 21. Put heart into everything you write. ... 62
- 22. Finish your novel, because you learn more that way than any other. ... 65

PART II: TACTICS 66

- 23. The writer of potential greatness settles not for "mere fiction." ... 68
- 24. A writer with a credo will not be tempted to settle for mediocrity. ... 71
- 25. Write hard, write fast, and the fire of creation will be yours. ... 77
- 26. Edit slow, edit tough, with a process both clear and cool. ... 84
- 27. Test your premise to prove it worthy. ... 86
- 28. The fully engaged writer must extend operations to the two levels of story. ... 90
- 29. Disdain not the freshness of small improvements outside comfort zones. ... 94

30. The key to reader bonding is falling in love with the Lead. ... 96
31. Deploy a character who reveals both inner struggle and inner conflict. ... 100
32. The writer who understands redemption is on the border of enduring fiction. ... 104
33. A premise must be supported by fresh, solid scenes. ... 107
34. When you are stuck, call on a word and its cousins. ... 114
35. The use of a voice journal will keep characters from becoming little versions of the writer. ... 116
36. Speed is the essence of the opening. ... 119
37. Discipline clichéd or predictable story beginnings. ... 124
38. Learn to pace your scene openings for specific effects. ... 127
39. Remember that love means never having to say, "I love you." ... 129
40. Characters all alone should do more than think. ... 131
41. Apply the Spencer Tracy secret for creating memorable characters. ... 132
42. Utilize the Q Factor as a strategic weapon for motivation at just the right time. ... 136
43. Give backstory the proper respect, and it will help readers bond with your characters. ... 142
44. The dropping in of backstory should be active. ... 145
45. Progressive revelation keeps readers turning pages. ... 150
46. Dialogue will compel the turning of pages if it is a compression and extension of action. ... 152
47. The innovative writer will sometimes write dialogue only, then fill in the blanks. ... 154
48. For scenes to move with deliberate speed, the writer must grasp the truth behind RUE. ... 155
